December News 2017

Veterans Day Program,

Sykes Hall

Friday, November 10, 2017

The mural was a success! Members of CREATE! and art students had individually worked on pieces cut from a small part of a photograph, that when placed together, represented the Marine Corps Iwo Jima Memorial in Arlington, VA.

This historical monument shows the strength, honor and dedication these marines had for America, especially while defending our country. We wanted to do our “visual” part for the annual program by honoring their service. Thanks to those artists who stayed after hours to complete the mural, as well as the members and students who contributed their time. We are thrilled to be able to represent Washington School’s visual art community with works of art such as this.

Tape Sculptures

Ever since the week before Thanksgiving, when walking down the hall near the art studio, people thought we were making a movie! Why?!

The following was overheard: "Wrap!!

TAPE...TAPE... and -CUT!! ... Then we added "Sculpt! Form...CREATE!!!!

The latest studio project is really starting to get sticky- some static cling has been going around and I just keep humming that Meghan Trainor tune, you know-it's all about that "tape"! Tell fellow students to look out for our "sticky" sculptures in the classrooms and halls!!!! We will install them throughout the school early January.

What's next...The following project was introduced Tuesday, 12/5/17- a paper "form". Members will create their own designs on two sides of a specific type of paper. After designing, different paper manipulation techniques will be used to create either a freestanding paper sculpture, or a mobile- where you can hang it from the ceiling! Remember these techniques for when we get back from break!

Throughout 2018 we will create our own "altered book". In January everyone can either bring your own book that may be special to you (and your parents don't mind you transforming into an artwork) or use one we have in studio. Mrs. Pinnow has two examples behind my desk for you to refer to and to get a grasp on the different media that you can use to create your own “altered book!” Our last after school meeting will be on December 14. Happy Holidays!

Important Dates for December:

Club Meetings will be at break, the 1st Wednesday of each month!
